K-TYPE COMMERCIAL LICENSE AGREEMENT

Purchasing a K-Type font grants you non-exclusive rights to use the font in commercial design for the web, film/video and print.

The font may be stored on up to five workstations and output devices; multiple licenses can be purchased where more 'seats' are required.

You cannot legally give the font to others or install it on their machines (with the exception of co-workers and your service bureau). You can embed the font securely in non-editable documents.

Web-font usage is not permitted under the terms of the Commercial License, but is covered by the Fontspring @Font-Face Web-font License.

To incorporate a K-Type font file within a computer application or game, or for use on an unlimited number of workstations, a more comprehensive Enterprise License should be purchased from K-Type.

Fonts are supplied "as is". Every effort is made to ensure that the files will behave properly, and whilst mistakes and omissions are corrected cheerfully and quickly, K-Type will not be liable for losses incurred by 'software failure'.
